NEW TECHNOLOGY

Covenant Lab Features PNA Quick FISH Technique for Rapid I.D.

Covenant HealthCare Laboratory is pleased to announce additional testing for rapid identification of Staphylococcus aureus, and coagulase-negative staphylococcus directly from positive blood culture bottles using PNA Quick FISH technique (Peptide Nucleic Acid Fluorescent In Situ Hybridization)

The ability to accurately identify the etiologic agent at the time when it is most critical will allow re-direction, escalation, de-escalation, discontinuance, etc. of therapy based on the organism identified. An identification of Staphylococcus aureus may indicate escalation of therapy. The identification of coagulase-negative staphylococcus may allow discontinuation of vancomycin, possibly decreasing patient length of stay.

Blood cultures with Gram positive cocci in clusters in the first bottle of a set, will be stained using this technique as a preliminary report:

Staphylococcus aureus; presumptive ID by PNA Quick FISH

Coag-negative staph (CNS); presumptive ID by PNA Quick FISH

Non-staphylococcus; presumptive ID by PNA Quick FISH

The Microbiology lab will be performing two runs of PNA Quick FISH Monday through Friday and one run on Saturday and Sunday.

Any questions regarding testing, please contact Lynn Taylor at 583.6755, Michelle Bauer at 583-6726, or Dr. Nicholas Hruby, Pathologist, 583.6703.
